

Risk Control Resources | Driving Courses

Berkley Human Services has partnered with J. J. Keller to offer two interactive online training courses: Distracted Driving, and Defensive Driving. You can train your employees with confidence knowing that each of J.J. Keller's programs is backed by nearly 25 years of training development and experience.

Distracted Driving

Designed to change distracted driving habits and help all drivers deal with the dangerous habits of others, this course will help you to avoid being a distracted driver by explaining how to recognize driving distractions, how to manage distractions and deal with other drivers who are distracted, and how to avoid a distraction disaster.

OVERVIEW: Aimed at commercial motor vehicle drivers and others who drive as part of their profession. Details the strategies drivers can use to deal with their own distracted driving and that of others.

Covers the following topics:

- Types of distractions
- Technology as a distraction
- Inattention blindness
- Steps to avoid distracted driving
- Recognizing the signs of other distracted motorists
- What not to do when sharing the road with a distracted driver

After completing this course, employees will know:

- How to identify common driving distractions
- Why electronic devices are serious driving distractions
- What steps you can take to avoid being a distracted driver
- Why inattention blindness is a major cause of crashes
- How to recognize and react to a distracted driver
- What strategies will help you avoid driving distractions

Defensive Driving: Light Vehicles

If you have employees that drive during the work day, Defensive Driving: Light Vehicles provides training that could save you thousands, and save their lives. Great for both first-time and refresher training, this training program covers the basics that every driver of non-CMV/non-DOT vehicles should know about defensive driving.

This course covers the following topics:

- Seeing and being seen
- Having heightened awareness
- Managing your speed and space
- Road, user and weather hazards
- Having the right attitude

After completing this course, employees will be able to:

- Complete a thorough pre-trip vehicle inspection
- Understand the basics of Hazard Perception and what to look for while driving
- Understand how to use “what if?” scenarios while driving; also known as Decision Driving
- Manage their speed and space no matter the driving circumstances
- Drive defensively under any weather and road conditions

This course is also highlighted by J. J. Keller’s exclusive “Simulation-Based” exercises designed to put the student’s comprehension to the test in a unique and highly interactive simulation.

Intended Audience: All employees who may drive on the job

Length: Approx. 75 minutes
